

Amy goes through series of 'firsts' in America

By TERRY DAVENPORT
Post Staff Writer

Life is a series of "firsts" for 14-year-old America "Amy" Manzanares of Daly City.

Before Christmas she saw Santa Claus and ice skaters for the first time.

In October, she dressed up in a vampire costume and was introduced to trick or treating.

In September, her brown eyes brimmed with tears when her family surprised her with a birthday party — the first party anyone had ever given for her.

Amy marvels over a simple toy like a jack-in-the-box and thinks the inventors of the electric mixer, the washing machine and the blender are geniuses.

Listening to her reactions, you'd think she had grown up in a closet.

In reality, she grew up in Nicaragua in a home no different than those that most Nicaraguans live in.

Nicaragua is a country where only the rich can afford electricity, running water and appliances.

Amy's aunt and uncle, Barbara and Rogerio Manzanares of Daly City, began worrying about her and their other relatives in Nicaragua after the earthquake of December 1972.

"My family lost their house, their property, everything," Rogerio said.

The Daly City couple succeeded in bringing his mother here to live, but his father died in Nicaragua in April 1977 while a visa that would have brought him to this country was in the mail. Six months later, Rogerio's brother died in Nicaragua.

Things went from bad to worse for Amy when her mother died in November 1978, leaving her an orphan.

The woman's dying wish was that the little girl, whom she had named after this country because of her love for it, would be sent to live with her relatives in Daly City.

Barbara and Rogerio immediately began trying to obtain an emergency visa for Amy and soon learned that they would have to go through the complicated process of attempting to adopt her in order to bring her here.

They became exasperated as they filled out reams of forms and stood for hours in lines and they grew jealous of the thousands of "boat people" who were entering this country with such apparent ease.

Meanwhile, they scanned newspapers and watched the television news nightly for word of the political strife wracking Nicaragua.

They finally succeeded in getting the necessary visa last May — just a few days after they had learned that 15 persons had been killed in their homes in Managua, 10 miles from where Amy was staying.

Seven sobbing and smiling relatives smothered her with hugs and kisses when she arrived at San Francisco International Airport last May 16.

The first few weeks afterward were a blur for Amy. Learning new words and being introduced to new people and new things every day was exhausting. Her homesickness was evident when she saw films of Nicaragua on the evening news.

The first day of school was a traumatic experience. At luncheon, she asked her cousin-brother Roy if he would have his mother come and get her. He returned from calling Barbara to find Amy happily chatting away with some Spanish-speaking youngsters she had just met.

Barbara Manzanares reports that Amy is adjusting well now. Although she never was active in sports before, she loves to play basketball and football.

Thanks to the Jefferson Elementary School District's bilingual program, she's able to keep up with classwork and even got a B on her first report card.

Although she keeps in touch with friends in Nicaragua, she is losing her homesickness as she makes new friends.

She's still afraid of some appliances, such as the clothes dryer, but she's become adept at operating the dishwasher.

Amy likes using the dishwasher so much that she wanted to grow up to become a professional dishwasher when she first arrived here. Her ambition has changed; now she wants to become a flight attendant.

One thing that continues to bother Amy is the fact that teachers and children at school refer to Barbara and Rogerio as her "aunt" and "uncle."

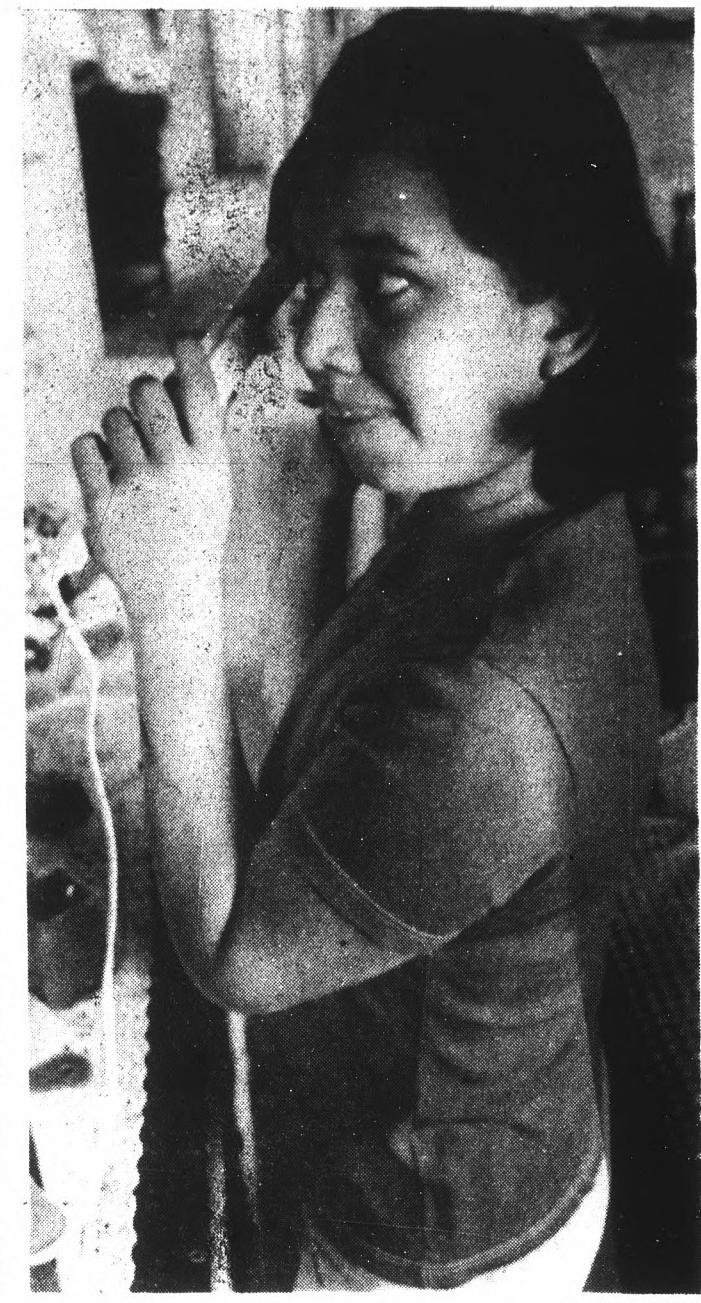

Barbara and Rogerio announced this month that those titles no longer are accurate.

The adoption papers have been finalized and Amy now is officially their daughter.

"We've encouraged her to call us 'Mom' and 'Dad' from the start and I think she realizes that she's part of the family," Mrs. Manzanares said.

How does Amy know that? Mrs. Manzanares laughed as she recounted how she had shouted at Amy when she caught her pulling weeds outside without wearing a sweater.

Mrs. Manzanares said, "You know what her reaction was? She smiled. I think she knows that I would shout at her if she weren't one of the family."

A look at the 1970s

SamTrans and how it began from nothing

By JOHN CURRY
Post Staff Writer

Looking back on the decade of the 1970s in San Mateo County and its cities, one can see immediately a difference on the streets of the urban centers and the quiet country roads — the omnipresent red, white and blue SamTrans buses.

In what may have been the biggest development in public transportation here since the coming of the railroad to the Peninsula 100 years ago, the San Mateo County Transit District in the past six years has started from nothing and by the spring of 1979 was rated the 36th largest public transit system in the United States.

In 1970, the two largest public transportation systems in the county were those of Greyhound Lines, Inc., carrying around 7,500 passengers a day on its Peninsula commute runs on El Camino Real and Bayshore Freeway, and the Southern Pacific railroad, well enroute at that time to its daily commute load between San Francisco and San Jose being halved, from 30,000 a day in 1964 to 15,000 daily by 1977.

A few local private bus carriers operated along the main traffic corridors of San Mateo and Daly City, but that was about it. The voters of the county in 1968 had turned thumbs down on financing of a West Bay Transit Authority that would have provided bus service along many of the county's main traffic arteries, including San Mateo to Half Moon Bay, where there was none at the time.

It was the era of the two-car family and commuting from the suburbs, and still is, but on 35-cent-a-gallon gasoline, it seemed in 1970 to be perfectly logical and feasible. Gas wars and gas station giveaways even made it desirable.

The needed highways for this increasing auto traffic followed the development of suburbia. The last link of Interstate 280 between San Mateo and Woodside in 1973, the almost constant widening projects on Bayshore Freeway and the building of expressway links between Bayshore and 280 through Redwood City and San Mateo and of Interstate 380 through San Bruno attest to this.

For those who didn't really want to drive all the way into San Francisco, the Bay Area Rapid Transit District opened its new Daly City station in the fall of 1973, giving this county a glimpse of what rapid transit can be.

BART had plans in the 1960s to extend to San Francisco International Airport and possibly on down the Peninsula, but local opposition to the cost, need of right of way and the likelihood it would serve enough local people stalled that. As 1979 ends, BART still is looking for somewhere around Daly City to build a "tail track" to store its westbound trains overnight, rather than run them empty back to its East Bay yards. This, BART says, would save millions of dollars a year in operating costs.

In the meantime, BART carries 15,000 passengers a day to and from Daly City, with its volume growing, thanks in large part to SamTrans.

But the highway building binge is over. The first Arab oil embargo, in late 1973 and early 1974, has brought on a re-thinking in the nation of how to move people around. One of the most dramatic examples of that re-thinking is SamTrans.

Moving with almost unheard-of speed after that first 1973-74 agony of gas lines and odd-even days, the federal and state governments began handing out transportation development funds to cities, with 11 of them in San Mateo County getting money to set up their own local bus systems. This was a help to such industrial and commercial centers as South San Francisco and San Mateo, who had destinations to be reached by commuters.

THEN AND NOW

Public transit in this county in the 1970s is mostly the story of the birth and growth of the San Mateo County Transit District. With its federal and state subsidies and its ridership spurred by the energy crisis, these two photos at the Daly City BART station dramatize the growth of SamTrans. In top photo, taken in 1974, local service was provided by the Northgate Transit Co., Inc. in a few driver-owned buses. The bottom photo shows a bus of the future, a 110-passenger articulated, on a test run by SamTrans last summer, joining a squadron of other SamTrans buses taking passengers to points all over the county and as far away as Palo Alto.

The nine-member SamTrans Board of Directors, made up of elected city and county officials and citizens group representatives, met for the first time Jan. 13, 1975.

It took awhile to gather a staff and to plan and coordinate a merger of the many city services under the SamTrans banner. A major step toward that was the coming aboard in October, 1975 of new General Manager John T. Mauro, former executive director of the Port Authority of Allegheny County, with a transit system that in one year carried 106,000,000 people in the Pittsburgh, Pa. area.

One of the first tasks of the SamTrans planners was to integrate the city systems so a rider wouldn't have to change buses at every city room communities as Millbrae, Pacifica, Burlingame, Belmont, San Carlos, Foster City and Menlo Park in the bus business, with most of their patrons finding they had nowhere to go but to a train station or a connection with another bus. Grand openings and ceremonies initiating service abounded in 1974 and 1975. With as little as 10 percent of their operating revenues coming from the farebox and the rest from government funding, the nearly-empty buses spelled boondoggle to many observers, but relief was on the way.

The state legislature passed the San Mateo County Transit District Act Aug. 14, 1974, followed by approval by the county Board of Supervisors and on Nov. 5, 1974 by the county electorate.

While this was going on, SamTrans in mid-1977 signed an agreement with Greyhound Lines, Inc. to take over the Greyhound commuter bus service between Palo Alto and downtown San Francisco, using Greyhound buses in SamTrans colors and Greyhound drivers, at a cost of $1.10 per mile.

This part of the system, serving the busy El Camino Real and Bayshore corridors, San Francisco International Airport and the Daly City BART station, was named the "Mainline Service" and today could be the fastest-growing Bay Area.

Starting with 7,500 passengers a day in July, 1977, the Mainline route patronage has grown in double-figure percentages every year.

In November, 1979, the Mainline buses hauled an average of 17,926 passengers a day. More frequent service, coordinated schedules with local service, commuter discounts and more stops where the patronage is has produced what SamTrans sees as a torrent of ridership.

The latest addition, for which bids will be called soon, are for 10 articulated buses, two-section monsters which bend in the middle around corners and which will carry up to 110 passengers each.

They couldn't arrive here too soon. An order for 100 new standard buses is expected to start coming in this January to shore up a fleet now badly overworked by an overwhelming demand for service that has grown greatly since the start of the current fuel crisis last winter.

In October, 1978, the 11 city systems in the county carried an average of about 420,000 passengers a month. SamTrans combined bus and rail total in November, 1979, was 1,716,738, or roughly 425 percent more. So far this fiscal year, through November, SamTrans had carried 8,073,068 passengers. The projection for the year was 16 million, but now the unofficial talk is of an outside chance for 20 million. Don't be surprised if it makes it with thousands to spare.

The Mainline idea, generally attributed to the innovative Mauro, wasn't the last of the brainstorms, however.

In November, 1977, a first of its kind agreement was reached with Southern Pacific to provide daily rail riders with discounts of 30 percent through a fare stabilization plan, to encourage people back onto the trains and offset a 25 percent SP fare increase. It too has been a crowning success, reversing the years-long downward trend in SP patronage. SamTrans pays the difference from its federal and state grants. In September, 1979, it tried adding single trips and round-trips to the plan for irregular commuters in a one-month trial project, with discounts of up to 40 percent. The figures were impressive, and the program may be back permanently.

In November, 1979, SP ridership was up 53.3 percent over the same month of 1978, adding fuel to the SamTrans and Metropolitan Transportation Committee contention that the SP commute trains, the last of them kind in the nation, should be kept. SP has been attempting for years to drop the service, claiming millions in annual operating losses, but in September 1979 agreed in principle with the state Department of Transportation for public acquisition of its equipment to take over the rail service between San Francisco and San Jose.

SamTrans officials were delighted.

They now see a completely integrated bus-rail service for the Peninsula, tied in with the Santa Clara and San Francisco county transit systems, which also have been participating in the fare stabilization program.

Local bus service in November was up 19.6 percent over last year, given a boost by the passage of Proposition 13 in June, 1978. With their income reduced, the first recourse of many local school districts was to cut or eliminate their school bus service.

This has put 15,000 school students on SamTrans, which in many cases had to alter its routes and/or schedules to accommodate them. In the San Mateo Union High School District, SamTrans hauls 1,500 Foster City students daily in its SamBus program, operated by a private firm under contract.

The bus fleet itself is being modernized completely. In 1976 the system inherited 60 buses from the cities, many of them too small, from eight different manufacturers and using three different kinds of fuel. The maintenance stories at the north and south county SamTrans maintenance bases were frightening.

To expand SamTrans also has bought up every used bus it could find, driving them here from as far away as North Carolina and Georgia. But new ones, 50 and 60 at a time and for the handicapped, have been appearing on the streets.

SamTrans now has a fleet of over 200 buses and hopes by 1982 or 1983 to have a fleet of 312, all less than five years old.

The latest addition, for which bids will be called soon, are for 10 articulated buses, two-section monsters which bend in the middle around corners and which will carry up to 110 passengers each.

Some long, long days for school districts

By JOHN HORGAN

A decade is ending. And public education in San Mateo County is still trying to recover.

It has been a long and momentous 10-year period for the county's public schools.

Many of the events and trends of the 1970s were damaging to the schools.

And there is more trouble looming for them on the horizon.

The specter of a statewide voucher plan worries public educators and they are almost unanimously opposed to it.

But a voucher system — in which parents would be able to choose which schools they want for their children — would be only one more in a series of body blows to the schools.

The past decade has not been kind.

"If Attila the Hun had specialized in schools, the 1970s would have satisfied even his crazed desire for discord," says James Guthrie, a professor of education at the University of California in Berkeley.

"In recent years, educators have had to accommodate to awesome changes such as those accompanying state and federal special education mandates, high school proficiency standards, women's equity demands, bilingual program requirements, desegregation decisions, career education proposals and initiation of formalized collective bargaining."

He adds that California has been forced to adjust to four major factors which have greatly influenced the amount of money available to public schools:

- Declining enrollment

- The Serrano-Priest court decision, which ordered that spending per student be made more equal throughout the state.

- Proposition 13, which dramatically limited spending per child even further.

- Inflation.

This county, like others in the state, has felt the serious effects of all this change.

In the 1970s, public school enrollments in grades kindergarten through 12 fell from 124,819 to 88,614.

The loss of 36,205 children represents a decline of nearly 30 percent.

In the past four years, the drop has been even more precipitous. The public schools have lost 26,741 students since 1975.

That figure nearly equals the total enrollment of the 14 smallest districts in the county today.

At the same time, private school enrollments in the county are increasing.

In the 1970s, private and parochial school student numbers in grades kindergarten through 12 went from 11,398 to 13,403.

That represents an increase of nearly 18 percent in the past decade.

About 14 percent of all available students in this county are now attending private or parochial schools. Ten years ago, about 8 percent of the overall total were in those schools.

To cope with depressed finances and dwindling numbers of pupils, the public schools here have been forced to close facilities and consolidate and trim services and programs.

In the first year after passage of Prop. 13, the 24 public school districts in the county (including the San Mateo County Community College District) lost $18 million in income.

Recent legislation returned $11 million to those same districts but, this year, they are still $7 million behind their 1977-78 totals.

In the past five years, 25 county public schools have been closed — and more closures are in the works for the early 1980s.

As the schools have tried to cope with these negatives, their teaching staffs have been reduced, salaries have not kept up with inflation and morale has suffered. In the past decade, county voters turned down 20 of 24 school revenue increase measures at the polls.

Teachers are being laid off because of declining enrollment with routine precision every year.

Teaching staffs — because of tenure laws which protect those with the most years of service — are growing increasingly older.

A recent survey in the Sequoia Union High School

District indicates the depth of that circumstance.

In that district, of 450 instructors, only 10 are under the age of 30 this year.

Strikes are becoming more common.

As an example, the teachers in the Jefferson Union High School District have gone out on strike twice in the past two years.

The 1979 strike was the second-longest teachers' strike in U.S. history.

The clientele served by local teachers is changing, too.

As the number of white students declines, the number of minority children is on the rise.

The most recent estimate of the ethnic minority surge shows that the county's public school population is now made up of about 30 percent minorities.

About half of those students are Hispanics.

The growth in the number of minority students in the past five years at the high school level has been illuminating.

The San Mateo County Community College District has been studying this trend with interest.

Under the direction of Gilberto de la Rocha-Petrus, the district has been attempting to determine what kind of academic market exists in the county's Hispanic communities.

Statistics indicate that there is a real need to address the educational concerns of such children.

The five-year figures on minority enrollment growth culled from the four largest high school districts in the county have made that point clear to district administrators.

What follows are figures for the four districts, showing the total minority percentage in each district in 1974 and then in 1978:

- Jefferson Union High School District — 32 percent to 41 percent.

- South San Francisco Unified School District — 20 percent to 36 percent.

- San Mateo Union High School District — 15 percent to 21 percent.

- Sequoia Union High School District — 24 percent to 29 percent.

The dominant minority group in three districts analyzed is Hispanic.

Sequoia still has more blacks than Hispanics but the number of blacks has actually dropped in the past five years by 10 percent.

According to the college study, there have been some major increases in certain minority groups.

Asian students have increased by 428 percent and 57 percent in South San Francisco and Sequoia, respectively. Filipino students have increased by 225 percent in San Mateo. Asians-Pacific Islanders have increased by 56 percent in Jefferson.

The college district, anxious to battle the tide of decreasing student numbers, plans to begin recruiting Hispanic students aggressively.

College officials say its television station, KCSM-Channel 60, will be a primary weapon in that effort.

The TV station is already envisioned as a resource which high school districts can utilize to help students improve their basic skills in the face of mandatory proficiency examinations.

Because high school finances have been so severely strapped, it is exceedingly difficult for these schools to employ tutors and extra help for students having trouble with the exams.

Some high schools are looking to the college district and the TV station as a possible solution.

First week of a new year and a new decade and lots of groups still are resting after a busy holiday season.

While some recuperate, others are getting beginning the new year by attending workshops, giving classes and extending an invitation to people to become members of groups.

Mrs. Ruth Hill is one of those that believes the first of the year is the perfect time to begin new projects and she has been working for several weeks to arrange a bay area appearance by the Rev. Dr. C. Peter Wagner of Pasadena.

As a result of her work, and the work of her committee members, Dr. Wagner will be in this area Friday and Saturday to present a workshop and slide show on "Spiritual Gifts."

The public can attend the opening presentation by Dr. Wagner on Friday at 7:30 p.m. at 201 Eucalyptus Drive. Workshops will begin at 9 a.m. the following morning and persons wishing to attend the Saturday session should sign up Friday evening.

There is no charge for either session. Mrs. Hill indicated.

The Business and Professional Women will meet Jan. 8 for a program featuring Gwan Eng and Leeanne Lee of Westlake. The Lies came to the United States in 1967 as newlyweds from Indonesia. Since that time they have settled into the American lifestyle. Gwan as an employee of PG&E and Leeanne as an employee of the Serramonte Montgomery Ward store.

Next Tuesday they will speak on Indonesia, its people and the lifestyle of that tiny island nation and show a film. Native crafts will be on display and a special Indonesian dinner will be served.

Reservations, cost $4 per person, may be arranged by calling Sally Eichfield. All business and professional women are invited.

Mrs. Hildegard Hanson will be the hostess for next Wednesday evening's meeting of the Alpha Iota sorority.

In addition to the regular business session, plans will be made for a delegation to the regional meeting of the sorority in San Diego in February.

Ed O'Connor, representative of PG&E, will be the guest speaker at the January meeting of the Daly City Area chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons.

O'Connor will present a film of the scenic wonders of California at the Jan. 14 meeting in the Westlake Recreation Center.

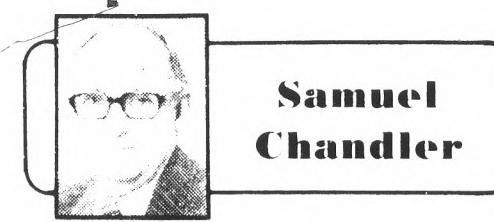

The social hour will begin at 10:30 a.m. with the business session to start at 11:30.

Mrs. Eileen Winters, the newly-installed president of the seniors group, has indicated that all persons over 55 years of age are invited to attend AARP meetings and consider membership.

Dues are $2 per year. Mrs. Grace Loy and Mrs. Enid Williams will be on hand on the day of the meeting to answer questions from newcomers and to collect annual dues from new members and renewing members alike.

From the office of the registrar at Skyline College comes a reminder that Jan. 15 is the final day to register by mail for the spring semester of the extended education program.

In person registrations will be accepted at the college Feb. 1 and 2. Classes will begin Feb. 4.

During the 1970s, pornography came out of the backrooms and off the bathroom walls to fill countless volumes of useless books and periodicals.

Writers seemed obsessed with descriptions of the life and manners of prostitutes and their patrons, while readers panted with pleasure over dirty jokes that were projected into novels.

To add to the obscenity, television opened the doors to profanity, filling scene after scene with flushing toilets and nasty words. Queenly actresses spoke in lurid terms of pure smut.

Sophisticated libertines were pictured in bed aboard luxury cruisers or living in sexually-integrated apartments to make incest look nice, though as naughty as ever.

In the 1970s, whenever someone protested at the appearance of such repulsive stuff, a thousand souls started to quake with fear of censorship and warn that a sacred freedom is in danger, thereby stifling free debate in a society that boasts of its intellectual freedom.

But the fact remains that during the 1970s and, even now, Americans need to be reminded that "vulgarity is the eighth sin," as James Russell Lowell wrote.

The peril rises from the fact that both pornography and profanity are vulgar, having no delicacy. The writer that relies on them fails Voltaire's test for beauty as something that pleases the eyes and for sweetness as something that charms the soul.

Pornographic writing in the 1970s, and always, is an enemy of serious literature. The author who produces it must merely startle his reader or tickle his most primitive emotions.

Excellence in sentence structure and the choice of words are secondary to such an author as long as he suggests obscene or unchaste subjects.

In pornography, social purpose seldom appears. There is no attempt to advance mankind or push him to get rid of his incongruities. There is little attempt to fathom the soul of a man or show his relationship to nature.

Instead, there is a conscious attempt to picture him as a creature lower than reptiles, lizards and toads," as Mrs. Jameson wrote, and living in a world that Rushkin described as filled with "old shoes, crockery and ashes."

Perhaps in the 1980s Americans will realize that pornography is unworthy of them.

Getting rid of it calls for an individual effort. It will not fall before the courts or the riots of censors, but only when readers and viewers refuse to accept that which appears to be lewd, impure, foul, repulsive.

If a book disgusts you, refuse to read it. If a program appears indecent, indequate, turn it off.

It is time to lift America's head above the gutter.

Sports, boat show

Backyard sports will be revived at the San Francisco Sports and Boat Show during its 38th annual run at the Cow Palace Jan. 11-20, show manager Thomas Rooney announced.

In a departure from conventional sports and a mosaïc look backwards, the show will feature pogo sticks, yo-yos, hula hoops and the grand old game of marbles in a games arena.

Children will give demonstrations and instructions in the "fun we forgot," according to Rooney.

"Kids whose weary eyes are glued to the flickering tube will find our revival of backyard sports a revelation and dad can relive his first and begin his second boyhood at this year's show," says Rooney, adding "Backyard sports are a gas saver."

Doors open at 1 p.m. weekdays and 11 a.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

Creative dramatics

The Daly City Recreation Department has announced pre-school creative dramatics classes to be Monday mornings at the Westlake Park Community Center, 145 Lake Merced Blvd.

The class will be taught by Joan Marvier and is designed for children 3-5 years old.

"Children will explore the world of imagination through dramatic games, music, story-telling and crafts," says Ms. Marvier.

Advanced registration is required and forms must accompany fee. Fees will not be accepted at class.

Forms are available at each Daly City library or the Daly City Recreation Department, 134 Hillside Blvd., Daly City, 94014.

Man arrested

A San Francisco man was taken into custody Friday afternoon in connection with the shooting of a Daly City woman at 5:30 p.m. Friday, police said Saturday.

James Provost, in his late 50s and a San Francisco resident, was arrested and charged with attempted murder.

The woman, Angela Garcia, 29, who gave her address as 83 Oriente St., Daly City, was shot once in the abdomen. She was taken to San Francisco General Hospital where her condition is reported as stable.

Police said the shooting occurred in front of 91 Oriente St. Authorities said they have not been able to determine a motive.

READ-a-thon

Children reading books at their reading level and for their own enjoyment, and asking family and friends to pledge a dime, a quarter, dollar or more for every book read is what the READ-a-thon for Multiple Sclerosis is all about.

Last year in the Northern California Chapter, National Multiple Sclerosis Society's fourth annual MS READ-a-thon, 6,600 youngsters from 300 schools in the chapter's 13 counties read more than 100,000 books and raised nearly $146,000.

Funds raised in the READ-a-thon support the research and patient service programs of the National MS Society.

Children between the ages of 6 and 14 in public, private and parochial schools are eligible to participate in this month-long reading incentive and fund-raising program.

Call the MS Society in San Francisco for more information on the MS READ-a-thon and multiple sclerosis at 495-READ. Those outside the Bay Area can call collect.

Women in transition

The "Women in Transition" program at Skyline College, designed for women who would like to start or renew their college education, will hold a special meeting for women interested in the program Jan. 22, from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., in Building 8, room 8219, on campus.

For details, call 355-7000, ext. 358.

New directors

The Peninsula Humane Society of San Mateo County has announced the election of three new members to its Board of Directors.

The new directors are Mrs. J. Hart Clinton, Charles Burkett and Carolyn Dobrevich.

The Peninsula Humane Society is a private non-profit animal welfare organization dedicated to the care and protection of needy animals. It is located at 12 Airport Blvd., San Mateo, and serves all the residents and animals of San Mateo County.

Films at library

The Pacifica Library has scheduled a number of films for Fridays in January.

The first two programs — Jan. 4 and Jan. 11 — will feature films for preschoolers and elementary age children. The Jan. 25 films also are for that age group.

The Jan. 18 film, "The Horse With the Flying Tail," is for children of all ages.

'Godspell' on tap

Tryouts for St. Veronica Church Players' fourth annual production, "Godspell," will be Jan. 11 at 7:30 in the parish hall at the church, 434 Alida Way, South San Francisco.

Singers 13 years and older are needed, both youths and adults. Singers should come prepared with a song and also will be asked to do an impromptu skit, according to Ron Hines, producer/director.

"Godspell" will be performed on three successive Friday and Saturday nights after Easter.

Last year the St. Veronica Players did "The Wizard of Oz."

For details, call Hines at 355-5202.

Receives degree

Shari Lynne Bradix of Daly City received her pre-law bachelor's degree in ceremonies at Wayne State College, Wayne, Neb.

Colma soldier helps Indian tribes

Christmas was different this year for 2nd Lt. Randall C. Lasley of Colma.

Instead of going home for the holidays, he helped medical personnel at the Gallup Indian Medical Center (GIMC) in Gallup, N. Mex., continue to provide a much needed medical service to the Navajo and Zuni Indian community.

Lasley, son of Mrs. Carol J. Lasley of 116 Village Lane, Colma, and Robert C. Lasley of 1235 North Gustine, Calif., is a medical services officer with the 16th Support Hospital stationed at Fort Riley, Kansas.

In October, 40 members of his unit came to Gallup to help the Indian Health Service set up a portable hospital that operates while portions of the main hospital are remodeled.

"This will be a good opportunity for me to learn more about hospital operations first hand," he said.

Ralph Royer, hospital administrator at GIMC, explained renovation would have caused severe overcrowding at the hospital. This left little space to move patients around. Someone on his staff "jokingly" suggested they call the military for a "MASH" unit like the one on television to help alleviate the space problem.

"I contacted the military and they came up with the unit from Riley. Without this unit, we couldn't have provided patient care," he said.

The portable hospital Lasley works in is called a Medical Unit

Self-contained Transportable, or "MUST" for short.

The MUST is an inflatable structure that closely resembles a giant air mattress. It is made up of a combination of rubber and nylon cells and has metal expandable shells on each side that look like cracker boxes. These shells contain the operating rooms and sterilization units of the MUST.

KEEPS RUNNING

Randall C. Lasley of Colma keeps things running inside the MUST hospital.

The MUST is kept alive with several turbine powered portable generators that provide the hospital with the necessities of heat, air, and electricity. Large air ducts which look like octopus tentacles are seen on the outside of the MUST. They carry heat and ventilation from the generators which must respond to temperatures as low as five degrees at night to warm 50 degree mercury readings in the daytime.

Only a portion of the actual field hospital is needed at Gallup. Ten sections were put together to form a nucleus which had to fit in the parking lot behind the main hospital. The MUST has two operating rooms, two rooms designed for obstetrics care, a food preparation unit, and a medical preparation unit.

Lasley said he thinks the work in Gallup will be both rewarding and challenging. "This assignment will be demanding because it will be my first position as a commander and I will be in new and unfamiliar surroundings," he said.

Assistant director of nursing, Marion Smith said the staff was apprehensive about working in the MUST in the very beginning because they had never used the equipment. "After the first child was delivered in the MUST, everyone was impressed," she said.

As for the future, Lasley said he plans on continuing in the Army. "Hopefully, I can get into the operations and plans side of Army administration someday," he said.

The 23-year-old soldier is a 1974 graduate of Liberty Union High School and has a degree in chemistry from California Polytechnic in San Luis Obispo.

MASH IS A MUST

Looking like a giant octopus, above, the Medical Unit Self-contained Transportable (MUST) is an instant extension of the Gallup Indian Medical Center. MUST units are equipped with lights, heating ducts in the ceiling and full hospital equipment.

'DEEP FREEZE 80'

Navy Storekeeper Seaman Michael E. Broughton, son of David and Luzeal Broughton of 775 Clarendon Drive, Pacifica, is participating in operation "Deep Freeze 80."

He is a member of the Naval Support Force Antarctica (NSFA), based at Port Hueneme, Calif., and deployed to McMurdo Station, Antarctica.

This year marks the 25th consecutive year of Navy support in Antarctica. Operation "Deep Freeze 80" is geared toward providing massive logistical and life-sustaining support for scientists conducting research projects sponsored by the National Science Foundation.

Assisting the NSFA in the operation will be three U.S. Coast Guard icebreakers, two Navy ships, U.S. Army personnel and units of the Royal New Zealand Army and Air Force.

Broughton joined the Navy in January 1979.

REENLISTS

Navy Aviation Structural Mechanic 3rd Class Richard N. Jenson, whose wife, Beverly, is the daughter of Charles E. and Ruth A. Van Winkle, 330 Loma Vista Terrace, Pacifica, has reenlisted for four years while serving with Fighter Squadron 124, Miramar Naval Air Station, San Diego.

He joined the Navy in May 1974.

IN INDIAN OCEAN

Navy Seaman Gary A. Bottarini, son of Walter A. Bottarini of South San Francisco has deployed to the Indian Ocean.

He is a crewmember aboard the replenishment oiler USS Wabash, homeported in Alameda, and currently operating as a unit of the U.S. 7th Fleet.

The Wabash is part of a carrier task force which departed the Philippines for the Indian Ocean to join another task force operating there. Nineteen U.S. Navy ships are operating in either the Indian Ocean or Arabian Sea areas with more than 14,000 U.S. sailors and Marines aboard. During the deployment, he will be participating in training exercises with these other 7th Fleet ships and those of allied nations. Port visits are scheduled in African and Middle Eastern countries.

COMPLETES TRAINING

Coast Guard Seaman Apprentice Robin E. Gipson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Gipson of 165 Werner Ave., Daly City, has completed recruit training at the Coast Guard Training Center, Cape May, N.J.

During the nine-week training cycle, trainees studied general military subjects designed to prepare them for further academic and on-the-job training leading toward their qualification in one of the Coast Guard's 26 basic occupational fields.

Included in their studies were first aid, seamanship, Coast Guard history and regulations, close order drill and damage control.

A 1976 graduate of Galileo High School, San Francisco, she joined the Coast Guard in July 1979.

TO ILLINOIS

Airman Mohinder Dindri, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lachman S. Dindri of 111 Chester St., Daly City, has been assigned to Chanute Air Force Base, Ill., after completing Air Force basic training.

During the six weeks at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, the airman studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special training in human relations.

In addition, airmen who complete basic training earn credits toward an associate degree in applied science through the Community College of the Air Force.

The airman will now receive specialized instruction in the aircraft maintenance field.

Airman Dindri is a 1978 graduate of Jefferson High School, Daly City.

Mid-Peninsula Singles

The Mid-Peninsula Singles, a group of singles sponsored by the Mid-Peninsula Parish Churches, have scheduled three events during the next five days.

On Jan. 3, a sharing and caring group will meet at 7:45 p.m. at the Burlingame Methodist Church, with the Rev. Sally Armin, associate pastor, leading the discussion.

On Jan. 6 at the Hillsdale Methodist Church, 7:30 p.m., old-time movies will be shown, and on Jan. 7 the group will meet for dinner at the Hyatt House Coffee Shop, Burlingame, from 5:30-7:30.

For details, call 349-3211 or 345-9876.

BRIGHT LIGHTS BY LLOYD JOHNSON

Restaurants/clubs all set for big year

As in years past, master chef VINCENZO LO GRASSO, owner of DAL BAFFO European restaurant in Menlo Park, resolves to maintain the high standards of his service and cuisine, and to make every day like Christmas ... PHIL LEHR of PHIL LEHR'S STEAKERY, on the lower level of the San Francisco Hilton Tower, looks forward to another great year. Phil cooks gourmet steaks to sizzling perfection on his incredible Fasar, which uses magnetic energy and is completely flameless ... For a New Year starter, try one of the drink concoctions served at the bar of CHRIS VLASSIS' LA PINATA Mexican restaurant in Burlingame ... JIM SNADECKI'S SCOTTY CAMPBELL'S restaurant in Redwood City is a festive place to dine any time of the year. Countless sports luminaries and people of showbusiness consider it one of their favorite Peninsula dining spots ... TILLIE SCHOLTZ, who does all the cooking at her TILLIE'S 'LIL' FRANKFURT German and continental restaurant in Moss Beach, is frequently prevailed upon to take on private catering assignments ... NINA LICATA'S crew at VINCE'S Italian and Seafood restaurant is back on deck to serve full menu of luncheon and dinner specialties following their short holiday vacation ... ROSEBUD'S ENGLISH PUB, the $1 million restaurant on Geary Street's "Theater Row," features luncheon, dinner, late supper and cocktails. Sunday service from 3 p.m. 'til midnight ... Relax before or after shopping or theater - dine in a garden in full bloom at LEHR'S GREENHOUSE garden restaurant, in San Francisco. Service from 11:30 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. ... Sit back in a comfortable chair in a plush setting and look out through panoramic windows at the surging surf at THE MOONRAKER, NICK'S or CAPTAIN CHARLES, three great restaurants in Rockaway Beach, Pacifica, owned/operated by the GUST family ... When ordering from JOHN CHIANG'S luncheon and dinner menu of Cantonese and Mandarin dishes at GONG'S Chinese restaurant, South San Francisco, you'll note that some items may even be ordered in smaller portions at a lesser price ... ROMANO'S Italian restaurant, which is situated between rolling hills and the coastline of Pacifica in Rockaway Beach, is a relaxed setting for sipping and dining on these brisk days. Open from 4 p.m. ... If you haven't visited the quaint OLD CYPRESS HOUSE restaurant in Half Moon Bay, you owe it to yourself to experience something different in dining and atmosphere. Serving dinner seven days a week (lunch for groups only (of 10 or more) by advance reservation.

Fiddle contest slated

Cloverdale's Fifth Annual Old-Time Fiddle Contest will be Jan. 12 in the Cloverdale Citrus Fair building, from 10:30 a.m. until evening.

The contest is being sponsored by the Cloverdale Historical Society to support its museum fund.

Contestants will start registering at 9:30 a.m. Entry fees are $4 for the open division and $3 for the junior divisions. The junior-junior division, to age 11, and the junior division, 12 to 18 years, will lead off with the competitions at 10:30 a.m., and after a lunch break, the open division will begin competition.

Contestants will be competing for a total of $895 in prize money.

The open division will offer 10 cash prizes with $300 for first place. There will be three cash prizes for each junior division.

Trophies also will be awarded to the top winners in the three divisions and the oldest and youngest fiddler will receive a trophy.

All contestants must play three tunes — a hoedown, a waltz, and a tune of choice which can be any style — classical, jazz, bluegrass, swing — anything goes. The tune of choice will not be judged. The fiddlers may have accompaniment for all three tunes.

Dr. Robert Quam is publicity and program director and Edith Thompson will be master of ceremonies. The judges will be Del McGrath, Sacramento; Evelyn Horner, Redding; and Don Minnery, Ukiah. Buffalo Bob Brittain will be at the controls of his super sound system.

Bands making an appearance during the day will include the Pujol family of Napa, a four piece band consisting of bass, guitar, fiddle, and mandolin.

The Cloverdale Rotary Club will man the snack bar and provide parking. Admission to this all-day event is $3.75 for adults and $2 under 12.

For details, call Doc Quam, (707) 433-5103, Ruth Oeding, (707) 894-3495, or write to the Cloverdale Historical Society, P.O. Box 433, Cloverdale, CA 95425.

Good morning, good cooks.

California sports fans seem to build up hearty appetites cheering their favorite teams to victory. This colossal beef burger is a natural for your next gathering.

Instead of making individual burgers, start with a round loaf of brown and serve French bread and prepare this Beef Burger Round-Up hero-style sandwich.

The loaf is split and spread with a luscious blend of flavorful ground beef, shredded cheese, onion, parsley and savory seasonings.

This is baked until brown and crusty, then topped with sliced tomatoes and cheese to be a "giant" success.

Mugs of hot soup and a plate of fresh vegetables are perfect go-withs that are easy to prepare.

BEEF BURGER ROUND-UP

1 1/2 pounds lean ground beef
1 cup shredded Monterey Jack cheese
1/2 cup minced onion
1/4 cup minced parsley
1/4 cup catsup
1/4 cup dry bread crumbs
1 teaspoon chili powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
Dash bottled hot pepper
1 round (8 to 9-inch) brown and serve French bread
Sliced tomatoes
Sliced Monterey Jack cheese, cut in triangles

Combine the 1 1/2 pounds beef, one cup shredded cheese, half cup minced onion, fourth cup each parsley, catsup and bread crumbs, one teaspoon chili powder, half teaspoon salt, eighth teaspoon pepper and dash of hot pepper sauce, set aside. Split bread in half horizontally.

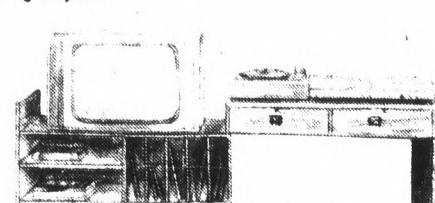

Spread each half with the ground beef mixture. Bake at 375 degrees 20 to 25 minutes, or until meat is well browned. Arrange tomato and sliced cheese over to beef, overlapping the slices.

Bake an additional five minutes or until cheese is melted. Cut into wedges to serve.

Makes two large rounds, about eight wedges each.

Jefferson High lauds its '79 football squad

By ROSIE TEJADA, MARCO PANATTONI,
BERNARD THOMAS and KAREN WONG
PLAYERS HONORED

"I've never worked with a greater bunch," said a teary-eyed Luis Sanchez, referring to the 27 players and two assistant coaches seated at the dais.

Sanchez, head coach of Jefferson's 1979 championship varsity football team, recapped the season at a banquet held in the team's honor by the Jefferson Alumni Booster Club last month.

John Madden, Jefferson graduate and former Oakland Raiders head football coach, was present to congratulate the team, reminisce his high school days and say a few humorous words about football referees.

"I love football. I love the Raiders. I hate refs, and I hate Pittsburgh," quipped Madden to arouse applause, boos, and laughter.

Al Teglia, another Jeff graduate and a former mayor of Daly City, presented the team with a plaque in recognition of its success.

Sanchez and assistant coaches Jack McGuire and Jeff Jones announced the recipients of team honors:

Co-Inspiring Players—Benji Santiago and Victor Chiles; Best Receiver—Manny Solis; Best Running Back—Sam Smith; Best Defensive Back—Jose Nuila; Best Offensive Lineman—Corey Franklin; Best Defensive Lineman—Jamie Jackson; Best Defensive Player—Charlie Banfield; Most Valuable Player—Richard Rodgers.

Other members of the championship team are: Norman Abuelencia, Alfredo Calderon, Doug Cheatum, Edwin Dunkley, Frank Famerio, Thaddeus Gill, Jose Hidalgo, Richard Huertas, Jeffrey McKeever, Mike Maldonado, Lance Martin, Eprain Peoporo, Calvin Peters, Freddie Proano, Vince Reyes, Kevin Sears, Blake Stewart and Jay Williams.

"The number is 11, and it will never be seen on the field again," announced Principal Elizabeth Hall, who retired Richard Rodgers' number. The 1979 NPL Player of the Year wore an overwhelmed smile as he was given a standing ovation as the evening came to a close.

HART BILL TESTING

"It's one of the easiest tests I have ever taken," was the reaction of one astute student. He was referring to the Hart Bill tests, which were given at Jeff Dec. 10-12. The purpose of the test was to make sure that students will have minimal skills in reading, writing, and mathematics.

Failing the tests or a part of the test will result in the student's receiving a mandatory reinforcement course in the subject he failed.

If a student fails the test in his senior year he will receive a certificate of high school completion, not a diploma of high school graduation.

NEW WOODSHOP TEACHER

After 16 years, Alfred "Skip" Delsarto has returned to Jefferson High.

Delsarto, who is now Jeff's woodshop teacher, is a member of Jefferson's class of 1963. He was called "Skip" by his classmates for a reason he cannot remember.

Living in Daly City all his life, he has a sister who graduated from Jefferson in 1961 and a brother who graduated with the class of 1970.

His marriage to Arlene for nine years has produced two children, Zack is 4 while Lauren is 1.

While attending Jefferson, Delsarto devoted much of his time to athletics, despite an after-school job. In his first two years, he was on the frosh-soph basketball and baseball teams. In his junior and senior years he was on the varsity teams.

Besides taking the required educational courses, he took classes in mechanical drawing even though he believed he might have a future in athletics, a plan which he later abandoned for the field of industrial arts.

Skip's college education at the College of San Mateo came to a halt when he was drafted. When he returned, he enrolled at the College of San Francisco, later transferring to San Francisco State University, where he majored in industrial arts and physical education.

Immediately after graduating from college in 1972, he began teaching woodshop and coaching baseball at Westmoor.

Excited at returning to Jefferson, he is even more excited being the only woodshop teacher here. He would like to try to set up a good program at Jeff. Having an industrial art math class at Jefferson is another one of his goals.

Being at Jefferson might revive old memories, but there are definite changes, he says. For one, he believes that Jefferson lost many students when Serramonte was built. He also sees more people with different ethnic backgrounds.

If the opportunity arises, he will coach sports this year. Delsarto will be an assistant baseball coach this year but would like to get even more involved.

Delsarto likes helping students, just like the teachers who helped him when he was in high school.

FRENCH RESTAURANT

Learning the culture of a country is as important as learning the language. On Dec. 13, 20 students enrolled in French classes, Wim Beringer (teacher) and Mr. and Mrs. Harris McFerrin (guests) gathered together in a San Francisco restaurant's dining room to taste the food from the other side of the world.

Escargots de Bourgogne and Pate Maison started off this exquisite French dinner. There were other hors d'oeuvres, but many people wanted to try something "different."

Tardiness began the evening. Many people were late because they could not find the restaurant.

Baskets of French bread were placed on the long table while these people waited for dinner. Slowly, bread disappeared.

Finally, the hors d'oeuvres arrive. Many were hesitant on trying this "strange" food but presently overcame their fear. (Some students, after tasting escargots, stated that these animals belonged on a pizza.)

Soup, after being placed on the table, was quickly drunk. Next was the salad, which had been mixed with a spicy dressing.

Choosing the main course was difficult. Veal Cordon Bleu, Cannelloni Supreme and Beef Bourguignon were a few of the many dishes selected from the menu.

Dessert was a choice of one of a variety of pies or a mousse.

The party broke up about 9:30 p.m. and each person went his way.

Altogether, it was an evening to remember.

NEW HEAD COUNSELOR

Frank Brady is Jefferson High School's head counselor this year, replacing Ms. Elizabeth Hall, who now is the Jeff principal.

"I have a background in counseling and have been in counseling for 23 years," he says. Brady applied for the job, was interviewed by a committee and chosen for the position by the school board.

As head counselor he provides an academic program in counseling services so that a majority of students graduate. He helps apply for scholarships and assists counselors in scheduling and programming. He also helps develop curriculum to meet the needs of students.

"I enjoy my new position very much," he says. "I like dealing with students, faculty, and parents, and the variety of things I do every day."

TEACHER DINER

"Work hard and get something out of life." That's what Wim Beringer, Spanish, French and former teacher of German, told his students many years ago.

Beringer accepted a mysterious invitation over the phone to dine with four of his former students. He discovered that evening of Dec. 12 that the four students were Don and Dave Urbanus, who took German, and Steve DeNatale and Gary Gfroer, who had been his French students. They dined at an Italian restaurant in San Francisco.

The four wanted to show their appreciation for his teaching them things like being optimistic and independent.

Perspective

BY ARVILLE FINACOM

Perspective today is a potpourri, defined by Webster as "a literary production composed of miscellaneous parts," one in which readers are invited to take a quick trip into 1980 to glimpse its environmental, educational, religious and people picture.

Early in the year, environmental activities centered around Coyote Point Museum in Coyote Point Park will include two docent training classes, "Foothill Communities," to be taught by Stanford University lecturer Herb Dengler from the department of Human Biology and Naturalist Bob Breen. San Mateo County Parks and Recreation Department, is designed for anyone interested in learning about the inter-relationships among local plants and animals as well as their interactions with climate and topography.

"Habitats of San Mateo," to be taught by Sonoma State University and Skyline College lecturer Ray Peterson, is designed for docents who plan to work in gallery at Coyote Point Museum explaining in detail the exhibit "The Place Called San Mateo." Both classes are open to anyone interested. Call 573-2595 for details.

In addition, Coyote Point Museum Association, in cooperation with the Junior League of San Francisco, Inc., will continue its successful "An Environmental Experience" series.

On Jan. 10, an evening presentation by Paul Resnick will help participants understand the details of non profit organization fund raising and management.

The morning of Feb. 6 will feature an exhibit fabrication workshop. In the March 6 morning presentation, Professor William Durham of Stanford University will explore his specialty of anthropology. On April 16, the series will conclude with a public speaking seminar designed to teach anyone involved in making public presentations a few of the successful tricks that professionals use to keep both calm and apparently well ordered.

All "Environmental Experience" events are open free to the public. Call 347-4781 for further information.

Although education activities of county groups will occur within county lines, there also will be events involving local people beyond county borders.

In February, those interested in television as "A Fact Of Life" will meet just over the county line at the Lake Merced Boathouse in San Francisco, to hear a diverse panel explore TV's long range influence on their areas of expertise.

Stewart Dimon, principal of San Mateo High School, will detail his thoughts about TV's effects on homework, classroom behavior and the sophistication level of students. KGO-Radio news personality Jim Dunbar will explore the effects of TV newscasting on the kinds of news stories radio broadcasters find left for them to cover. He is also expected to remark about news event "creation" by the TV medium.

Rick Malaspina, TV columnist for an East Bay newspaper, will discuss his print media job which would not exist without the "tube." And William Kartozian, representative of the Theater Association of California, will explain the results of movie competition with TV which has led both to high budget, special effects films as well as away from family type movie fare.

The Feb. 26 daytime conference is co-sponsored by Reviewing Stand North, the Bay Area based, inter-district, mass media committee of the California State PTA, and the Northern California Motion Picture and TV Coordinating Council.

Local 17th District PTA representatives to RSN include Ruth Galindo (756-8786) Daly City, and Jeanne Bertini (871-6721), Millbrae. Call either one for details.

Education for parenting will receive a push this coming year in both State House and White House Conferences, since 1980 has been declared the "Year of the Family."

Available from the Sacramento office of Santa Clara state legislator John Vasconcellos is a packet of information his staff has gathered in the past several years while working on the "California Task Force on Positive Parenting: Recelebrating Families."

Parenting education remains a top priority for the 17th District PTA parent education commissioner, Carole Didia of Daly City. Call her (992-1963) for information about the many opportunities offered locally.

Religious activities in 1980 will center around a renewed thrust in evangelism by established churches. Church leaders agree with many secular forecasters who see a return to an emphasis on the spiritual in the decade ahead.

Many church leaders also predict heavy self-analysis by church groups leading them towards increased lay participation in parish administration as well as towards redefinition of their social as well as religious service roles in the community.

In California, especially, white protestant and Catholic clergy will search for roots in their own cultural backgrounds as well as explore those of others in our rapidly changing ethnic populations.

A recent quarter course, "People of Color," team taught by an Asian, a black and a Spanish surname American protestant minister at the Pacific Lutheran Theological Seminary in Berkeley, sharpened participants' skills in such cultural awareness and analysis. A late winter conference devoted to Hispanic Ministry will further consolidate these learnings.

Local people will continue to make quiet news. Pastor Norman E. Nelson is to retire in early March — after almost 35 years in the ministry, close to 20 of them serving Calvary Lutheran Church in Millbrae.

Capuchino High School teacher Til Bertini continues his steady course as a Millbrae city councilman, holding to a well-defined line of public values as he does his best for his home town.

And there will be other people, too, as the year goes on, whose steady, conscientious work doesn't often make headlines, but whose dedication to the public good makes them worthy of note in Perspective.

Some say the 80's will be an "up" decade, that even ones usually are, since they follow "odds," which are traditionally "lows" in spirit and achievement.

Some forecasters predict the 80's will be a "do without decade," but their pessimism is tinged with hope by those who say that "do without" does not necessarily mean "do with less" but can mean "do with differently and creatively."

Four nabbed in a big drug bust

Four persons were arrested in a Larchmont Drive Friday afternoon in what Broadmoor Police Chief Bill Noonan said was the largest drug bust in his 22 months with the department.

Officers confiscated 102 bindles, small balloons filled with small amounts of what appeared to be heroine and ready for sale, with a street value estimated at $5,000, Noonan said.

Officer William Kelly and Reserve Officer Greg Love went to home at 633 Larchmont to investigate an animal complaint. The officers were tipped to the drugs when Love, who is paying his own way through a basic police academy training course in Modesto and just finished an eight-hour training session on drugs, smelled burning marijuana coming from inside the house, Noonan said.

Entering the house, the officers arrested five persons inside and one who was just leaving through the back door with the bindles, they reported. All were cooperative and there was no resistance, they said.

Two of the people were determined to be visitors who knew nothing about the drugs, and were released, Noonan said.

Booked at the Daly City jail on suspicion of possession of heroine and possession of heroine for sale, along with some lesser charges, were Alfredo Razo-Ballesteros, 20, Fernando Razo-Ballesteros, 23, and Matias Razo, 22, all of the Larchmont address; and Jesus Alvarez, 20, of San Francisco.

Bail was set at $5,000 each and arraignment was to be today in Northern District Municipal Court in South San Francisco. Noonan said the investigation is continuing.

THE THOMAS CIRAULOS

(Susan Kennelly)

Kennelly-Ciraulo

Family and friends of Susan Jane Kennelly and Thomas J. Ciraulo gathered recently to witness the couple's marriage at St. Andrew's Church in San Bruno. A reception followed at the Santo Christo Hall.

Susan, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Brown of Half Moon Bay, was given in marriage by her father. She wore an ivory crepe gown with an embroidered lace bodice and train, and her attendants selected apricot print chiffon gowns.

Joanie Watters performed maid of honor duties and Phyllis Sevick served as the matron of honor. Nancy Ann Ciraulo shared bridesmaid duties for new sister-in-law with Jeri Lettinger.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ciraulo of San Bruno asked Albert Ciraulo, his brother, to be his best man. Erik Kennelly, the bride's 12½-year-old son, shared ushering duties with David Tufo, Mike DeBono, and Larry Franzella.

Immediately after the reception, the newlyweds departed for a honeymoon cruise in the Caribbean. They are now at home in Mountain View.

The bride, marketing office supervisor for Pacific Telephone Co., is the sister of Thomas A. Brown. Her husband is the junior achievement advisor for Pacific Telephone. A graduate of the College of San Mateo, he belongs to the San Bruno Lions Club.

NURSES*NEW GRAD RNs

If you're a new graduate or interim permittee SEQUOIA HOSPITAL is now accepting applications for our special winter orientation program.
For many years, we have been committed to specializing in meeting the needs of the new grad and our thorough 4-week orientation is only the beginning of that process. The orientation is designed to meet your special needs and is continually adjusted to the individual as you progress in the RN role. Your first career decision is important, so we invite you to call our nursing department to arrange an appointment to discuss opportunities and tour the hospital.
